Stopping Elder Abuse Starts with Awareness

If it's summer and 90 degrees outside and an older adult is wearing a winter coat, it may be a sign of elder abuse.

That's one tip offered by Tamikia Morris, director of older adult protective services (OAPS) at Philadelphia Corporation for Aging (PCA), a department which works to detect, report and prevent abuse among older adults in Philadelphia.

Every year on June 15, PCA recognizes World Elder Abuse Awareness Day (WEAAD). The observance was started by the International Network for the Prevention of Elder Abuse and the World Health Organization, and provides an opportunity for communities around the world to promote a better understanding of the cultural, social, economic and demographic effects caused by the abuse and neglect of older people.

AGING IN PLACE:

Home-Modification Bill Could Lead to Lower Costs,
Partnerships for Home Care Providers

A bill allowing older adults to deduct home-modification expenses from their taxes was introduced in Washington, D.C. on 05/06/22.

If passed, the Home Modification for Accessibility Act would provide a boost to aging-in-place efforts, perhaps spurring greater partnership between home care companies and home-modification businesses.

The bill would allow adults aging in place to offset the costs associated with making modifications to their homes through early retirement withdrawals and a lifetime tax deduction of up to $30,000.
